France Loses A Round In Gold Fight U. S. Gold Supply Remains Stable

FRANCE has lost a battle in its gold fight with the U.S. dol-

That is the opinion this week of those in the international financial community who assessed French President De Gaulle's efforts to promote a return to the gold standard.

One New York bank executive described the French President's efforts this way:

"De Gaulle should have used his military logic. It is unlikely that as a general he ever advocated frontal assault on forces that out-gunned him 8-to-1. Yet, economically, that is what he did when he attacked the dollar. The result, of course, is that he has been repulsed and is in a weaker bargaining position than before."

The banker based his comparison of economic strength on the gross national products of the two nations: France about $78 billion a year, the United States $634.6 billion in 1964. The GNP is the total output of goods and services in a year.

The United States contends that the strength of a nation's currency depends on the strength of the economy behind it, not on gold reserves. Even so, the nation owns about a third of the free world's gold supply.

The French publicly deny that they attacked the dollar, or its ally the British pound sterling. They contend their position has been consistent in seeking reform of the international gold exchange standard.

The present gold exchange standard rests on the U.S. dollar as a reserve currency which can be converted at any time into gold by a foreign government at a fixed rate of $35 an ounce.

But during their heavy purchases of gold earlier this year — carried out with considerable public fanfare — the French questioned the convertibility of the dollar into gold. They contended the dollar is a weak currency.

Also, they urged revision of the gold exchange standard to eliminate the dollar as a key currency and re-establish the old basis whereby gold, not dollars, would be the medium for meeting international payments.

In the opinion of some financiers, the French purchases of some $975 million in gold earlier this year were designed not only to demonstrate their claim that the dollar was shaky, but to actually force a devaluation of the

Instead, U.S. countermeasures to protect the dollar — including the plan to reduce the balance of payments deficit—have strengthened the dollar's international

-In Cannes, France, finance officials of the six European Common Market countries met. Reports from the meeting were that France not only has called off its attack on the dollar, but also has abandoned its demand for radical reform of the gold exchange standard.

-In the United States statistical evidence mounted that the nation was stemming its outflow of dollars to meet international payments deficits.

—Despite the concentrated gold loss in the first few months of the year, there has been no decline in the U.S. monetary gold stock for nearly a month. It now totals $14.413 billion.

-The market reflected the end of the latest gold battle. The price of gold in international markets dropped to its lower level in months, hovering between $35.10 and $35.11 an ounce.

—The success of the U.S. payments program has dried up liquidity in Europe and interest rates on dollars in Europe have soared. The conversion of more than $1 billion of European-held dollars into gold during the past 12 months has contributed to the dry-up.

Liquidity is an economic word that, in effect, means the amount of cash on hand to pay bills.

Also contributing to the dryup has been the repatriation of U. S. corporate funds in Europe.

"(U. S.) bank lending to foreigners has come almost to a halt, and sizeable corporate short-term balances are being brought back from abroad," Arthur Bricker, vice president of New York's Bankers' Trust, told a group in Houston, Friday.

The United States should have plenty of gold "to support the dollar as a reserve currency internationally, provided our balance of payments is brought into equilibrium soon," Bricker add-

WASHINGTON — U. S. monetary gold stock has remained stable over the past few days, Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler indicated Monday.

Fowler said at a White House news conference that the United States had sold $975 million worth of gold this year through May 3. U. S. gold stocks now stand at about $14.413 billion.

The $975 million outflow represents no change from Federal Reserve Board reports over the past two weeks.

The U.S. gold stock declined by only $125 million in all of

A considerable amount of the gold outflow has been due to France's conversion of unusually large amounts of dollars, although some other European countries have also made large purchases.

The large outflow reflects, in part, the record deficit $1.5 billion in the U.S. balance of payments in the final three months of 1964.

Treasury and commerce officials have said that there has been tremendous improvement in the over-all balance-of-payments picture this year. But they have cautioned against excessive optimism.

Officials said the deficit was about $600 million in the first two months of 1965. They said this was partly offset by a surplus in March and that preliminary figures indicate another surplus in

Fowler's talk of the gold outflow came after President Johnson held a session with the Secretary; William McChesney Martin, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board; Kermit Gordon. Budget Director, and Gardner Ackley, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Ad-

Mr. Johnson said the meeting touched on prices and credit, legislative matters, the balance of payments, gold and a trip Martin made to South America.

The Treasury Secretary confirmed the administration is considering the possibility of phasing out excise taxes over a period of years - after a projected cut in these taxes of about $1.75 billion recommended for this year.

Rep. James G. O'Hara, D-Mich., introduced a bill Monday to phase out most federal excise taxes in three years.

Abraham Lincoln, An Historical Review Greenback And Fractional Currency Era Revisited

By: Christian F. Verbeke, F.R.N.S.

Why Historical Reviews?

Coin collecting for slot-rilling's sake? For study's sake? Or the advancement of numismatic knowledge as related to history, art, archaeology and economics?

These questions return with painstaking persistence and are inevitably linked with the basic goals set by coin collectors.

The answer to these questions can best be crystalized by examining certain basic alternatives in the approach to numismatics or even to its very minor companion—coin collecting.

What good is the completion of an album, say of Lincoln cents, when its owner is barely acquainted with the essential details of Abraham Lincoln's life.

The monumental work entitled "Abraham Lincoln: A History" (New York, Century Co., 1890, 10 vols.) was written by John G. Nicolay and John Hay, one-time private secretaries to President Lincoln. In more recent years the work has been termed as sometimes unreliable, the inexorable toll paid by sentiment to the discipline of exactitude. Yet it should be remembered that Nicolay and Hay grew up in the same region as Lincoln and "were intimate from boyhood with his friends and companions" (preface). Better known contemporary contributions to Lincolniana include those of Carl Sandburg and Dr. Roy P. Basler.

How significant is a designer's initial or the lack thereof, a variety, double or quadruple strike for all I care, on Lincoln cents, when its enthralled owner has never heard of the Lincoln-Douglas debates.

What is the economic or historical weight of, say, an "L" or the lack thereof on a 1864 Indian Head Cent when the collector of this item does not grasp the far-reaching implications of the issuance and discontinuation of greenbacks, or the effects of the gold price crisis during 1864.

This list of examples and alternatives can be pursued indefinitely—it is but a small factor in the confrontation facing numismatics today. The inactivity of speculative trading as witnessed in recent weeks is hopefully only the prelude for greater things to come, among them conceivably the virtual eradication of uninformed speculation and the fringe elements surrounding it.

Individuals financially disappoint individuals financially disappoint pointed in their initial approach to coin collecting (or investing?), however, need not be lost to the numismatic community, for a reformulation of goals can solve their moral crisis viz., by less preoccupation with price, mintage, albums, die breaks, and other paraphernalia, and in turn a greater concern with intrinsic numismatic knowledge best promoted by the acquisition of numismatic publications and references.

These digressions only strengthen the case for the need of more study in all fields of numismatics; and this brings us specifically to the history of U.S. currency under Lincoln — a period not only marred by a tragic Civil War but also highly significant from a monetary standpoint — the latter a direct consequence of the disastrous war.

Greenbacks and Civil War

An excellent account of the greenbacks or United States notes' issuance appeared in Horace White's "Money and Banking Illustrated by American History," Boston 1902). In his recapitulation, White writes: "United States notes, otherwise called greenbacks, or legal tenders, were issued by Congress during the Civil War, to the maximum sum of $450,000,000. They were similar in their nature and consequences to the Colonial and Revolutionary bills of credit that preceded them. but the depreciation was not so great. The lowest rate reached by them was 35 cents per dollar in the year 1864."

"The notes were originally made convertible, at the option of the holder, into bonds bearing coin interest at 6 percent. This connecting link between the notes and gold was unwisely repealed in 1863. If it had remained in force, the notes would have been exchanged for bonds whenever the price of the latter was above par, and specie payments would probably have been resumed automatically soon after the close of the war."

"As the notes were declared by law to be legal tender for all debts public and private, except duties on imports and interest on United States bonds, many people affirmed and believed that the principal of the bonds could be rightfully paid with greenbacks, although the latter were irredeemable. This misconception led to a political controversy of great bitterness, long duration, and doubtful issue."

"The cost of the was was largely enhanced by the use of irredeemable paper, the prices of arms, ammunition, and supplies having risen in consequence of currency inflation. The prices of commodities were relatively higher during the suspension of specie payments than the premium on gold. Dealers sought to protect themselves in this way against loss by fluctuations in the value of the currency."

"The issuing of irredeemable paper is sometimes called a forced loan, but it has none of the characteristics of a loan. A loan, even when forced, implies an accounting and repayment to the lender. No such thing is promised or contemplated when such paper is issued, but merely that somebody shall be paid something at some time. Even this promise is not always fulfilled."

"The value of greenbacks during the suspension of specie payments was recorded during the business hours of each day by actual sales and purchases of gold on the New York Gold Exchange. In 1864 Congress attempted to check the depreciation of the currency by closing the Gold Exchange and prohibiting sales of gold or foreign exchange for future delivery. The premium on gold advanced more rapidly after the passage of this act than before, and Congress repealed it two weeks later."

"Gambling in gold was one of the evils of the time, and almost a necessary one in connection with the foreign trade of the country. In 1869 a scheme was set on foot by an unscrupulous speculator for the purpose of 'cornering' gold, i.e., buying all the gold in the market and compelling persons who had sold it for future delivery to buy it from him and his clique. It. resulted in a most disastrous panic, ruining or seriously crippling hundreds of business men in the principal cities of the Union. The day on which the catastrophe occurred was afterwards known in Wall Street as Black Friday."

"United States notes never became current in California until after the resumption of specie payments. The business community declined to receive them, except at their value in gold. The Legislature of the state passed an act known as the Specific Contract Law, by virtue of which contracts should be enforceable in any kind of money the parties should stipulate for. This law was upheld by the highest courts of the state and of the United States."

Supreme Court Rules "The Supreme Court of the United States has held that a contract between private persons, if made specifically payable in coin, cannot be discharged with legaltender notes. Also (December, 1869), that the legal-tender act of 1862 was unconstitutional so far as it applied to debts contracted before its passage. The last-mentioned decision was reversed one year later (December, 1870). It was inferred from the language of the court in this decision that the power of Congress to make the notes of the United States legal tender between individuals on preexisting contracts was an incident of the war power. In March, 1884, the court held that Congress has power to make the notes of the United States legal tender in time of peace as well as in time of war."

Bureau of Engraving in 1862 The Bureau of Engraving and Printing owes its very creation almost exclusively to the necessity for issuing greenbacks as an emergency monetary measure.

"Actually, the Bureau did not come into existence until August 29, 1862. But the groundwork for its establishment was laid a year previously."

previously. "With firing on Fort Sumter and the President's call for volunteers to quell the ensuing state of rebellion, the Nation - already on the fringe of bankruptcy-was sadly pressed to finance a war. This and other war matters caused the President to call Congress into extra session on July 4, 1861. During this session, Secretary Chase recommended to Congress both a system of taxation and one floating loan. His scheme for borrowing included the issuance of noninterest - bearing notes which would circulate as money. Only because of the exigencies of the times did he make the latter proposal, urging great care 'to rrevent the degradation of such issues . . . 'There was a doubt in the minds of many people as to the constitutional authority of the Government to issue paper money. Congress adopted Chase's plan in an act of July 17, 1861 (12 Stat.259). As a result the first paper money issued by the U.S. Government came into existence. These notes became popularly known as 'demand notes,' a title brought about by certain provisions of their issuance. They were produced by the 'New York bank note companies'; i.e., the American Bank Note Co., under contract with the Government."

"One of the very first products produced by the Bureau, and certainly among the unique, was fractional currency. These were the miniature notes issued by the Government in place of coins during the Civil War and for some 10 years afterward. It can truly be said that they came into existence by a 'spin of the wheel of fortune.' They were the replacements for postage notes which, in retrospect, were of doubtful legal origin."

"Hoarding of coins by the timorous and avaricious soon followed. A case in point was the instance where a house in New York City collapsed from the weight of the coin cached there. Thousands of dollars in coin were secreted each day."

"Into this vacuum flowed privately issued tokens and scrip. The idea was certainly not new. 'Shinplaster' had become a derisive term applied to scrip, an outgrowth of public reaction to the worthless notes issued by private banks during the depression of 1837."

By William L. Meyers

It may be that every numismatic hobbyist has at times in his collecting felt the urge to advertise in a nationwide con publication. This advertisement may be just a classified ad, or possibly a full page buy and sell advertise ment, but still the excitement and pleasure exists. The collector or investor may advertise for a number of reasons. He may be interested in making a profit on his investment, or possibly he wants to rearrange his collection by disposing of certain unwanted material.

When a prospective advertiser considers the aspects of writing a coin advertisement, some questions quickly enter his mind. Will I have to use a business name in order to sell my coins? How much will the ad cost? Should I run a classified or display ad? What part of the selling price of the coin will be spent on advertising? What happens if the ad is unsuccessful? In the following paragraphs these problems of the advertiser will be discussed.

Creating your first coin advertisement can be a rewarding and profitable experience. If the ad is to appear in the classified section, where the advertising is printed in small type, as in newspaper columns, and is arranged according to subject under such listings as: cents, nickels, miscellaneous, etc., work on making the ad that you submit as clear and as short as possible, since you are charged in accordance with the number of words in the ad. It should be emphasized that in writing classified ads the object is to use words carefully and sparingly. For example, "I will sell", could be shortened to, "Will sell". If you use any grades of coins in your advertisement spell them out completely. This adds to the clarity of your ad, but does not infringe upon your word rate.

In a classified ad you are charged for the number of words that are to appear. Certain letter or word combinations may offer you a problem in trying to compute the number of words. The following example should help you to better understand how to count ad, work diligently to get the most for that advertising dollar. You must make your coins sound a little better than your competitors. You must have a reason why the consumer should purchase material from you or your business. Perhaps it is your liberal return policy, your fair grading, your prompt servicing of checks when material is out of stock, or completely sold out, that will influence your customers. All of these factors are taken into consideration by the prospective buyer and he will almost always select the dealer who has given him the fair and honest deal, the dealer who has shown him the greatest courtesy. You must always consider the buyer as a person like yourself, who enjoys being treated courteously and serviced promptly. The personal touch of sending a Christmas or birthday card or a small gift when orders are out of stock can win you or your business a lasting friend who might recommend you to his associates. Failure to comply with these simple procedures

The problem of determining how large an ad to submit is one that is easily solved. The ad should be as large as the material you are selling. When describing coins in your advertisement, be careful not to overdescribe common material, and do not hesitate to adequately describe your scarce choice numismatic material.

It is important that you make your advertisement a well planned honest effort that will benefit both you and the entire numismatic spectrum. Never rely on the price of the numismatic article alone to sell your coins. Include a price that is fair, not necessarily low, but one that is an honest price. Make the price easily observable to the reader, as most ads are only skimmed by the prospective buyer. Remember that many buyers purchase coins on an impulse. It is this impulse that you must try to create in your ad.

MARKET SUMMARY

MAY 12, 1965

By Russell Brown

THIS week saw new lows for the year scored by five of the eight series and an excess of declines over advances in a five to one ratio. And while the advances were all of a small order of magnitude, several of the losses were of a major nature.

Possibly the least unsuccessful series for the week was the Morgan dollars. Activity was mixed at approximately prior week's prices. But the volume noted was quite thin and the bag lot sales which were taking place during April are seldom seen. The 1882-CC was hit by a slight selloff and lost $20. There were no other large price changes.

The Franklins are returning to normal after their run of one month's duration. Many of the keys are slacking off and this week three of them lost ten dollars each in a market with few buyers. It was observed, however, that the 1955-P half tried to come back and did indeed make a small gain.

Roosevelt dimes have managed to remain aloof from most of the recent selling but the last several days have seen increasing quantities of the Rosys offered at bid price. Losses have ranged from several dollars to as much as $25 (1949-S). On its own merits the 1952-S managed to gain two dollars but it was alone among 22 declines.

Lincoln cents slowed in their downward slide and several issues which were in decline over the past fortnight scored slight reverses. But here again the gains were small and the surrounding losses were large. The small dates are now completely out of favor and each variety lowered its price once again.

Jefferson nickels continue to be mixed on the down side with the general price level at prior week bid. While the 1950-D held its own, the 1942-S, 1945-P and 1948-S dropped ten dollars each. And the 1942-D and 1952-D suffered five dollar losses. In summary, cent, nickel and dime all remain in general decline.

Proof sets were traded somewhat more heavily than in preceding weeks but the price levels continued to drop. While last week saw the prices of the earlier date sets dropping, this week saw a return to decrease of the late dates' quoted values. Percentage wise few of the losses were material but they were not buoyed by any corresponding advances. Another item noted was a desire by the few purchasers on tape to buy only choice sets. Unless the sets offered are perfect, they are simply not wanted except at vastly reduced prices.

In the Canadians, the impact of the new release of 1965 proof like sets is being felt by the entire set market. The 1965 set while losing another fifty cents and sinking to within less than a dollar of issue price has been joined by the rest of the late date sets in disfavor. The losses are not large but buyers are few and far between.

Quarters were on the quiet side this week as little buying was noted. The 1949-P ran into a bit of profit taking and lost $25. Several other issues lost slightly but in the main the series was generally unaffected by major price movement.

The Market Opinion

The market has developed a major need of support to "cover" those investors who bought in a year ago and now want out. A number of large dealers came up with an idea recently to plow some of their profits back into the trade by obtaining advertising in a number of papers explaining the potential of coin investment.

It is to be hoped that this idea reaches fulfillment and succeeds. With a new wave of buying thus initiated the present depression would rapidly give way to a resumption of the prosperity of late 1963.

A number of big name investors are overjoyed that the Canadian announcement of renewed order acceptance came at a time when the market price on the set was at a low ebb. The thinking is that with the rather gloomy short term outlook on the sets, there will be very little buying from the mint for investment purposes. And, of course, the fewer sets purchased, the higher the price will go in the future.

(Continued from Page 7) use your own name, or create a business firm and use that name. Although an individual's name has a certain personal touch, the business name has prestige and authority. In some states you are required by law to have a small business license; there may be trouble with the Internal Revenue Service, and other unforeseen legal red tape. For example, when you open a business' and you are the sole proprietor of the business you are required to report all profits made from that business on your Federal and State Income Tax Forms.

Also, instead of using your personal checking account, you might want to open a business account and have the name of the firm imprinted on all your checks, which is a somewhat more costly form of banking. These necessary steps in the formation of a business can be easily overlooked if one is seriously considering operating a full time business.

If after careful evaluation of the situation, you do decide on a firm name, be sure that this name is not one used by any other numismatic dealer in the United States or Canada. To make sure, you should consult coin publications, and recent directories.

If you have any connection with large numismatic groups in the United States or Canada, such as the American Numismatic Association, a reference to this should be included in all your advertisements.

Failure is a problem with which all coin advertisers must be con-(Continued on Page 13)

CANADIAN

1962 Canadian Double Date and Re-engraved Cents and Nickels are here to stay as prized collectors pieces, a coin that will not be overlooked. When collecting, type decimal or variety, these are coins you will want sooner or later, why wait and pay several times the price. Order from us with confidence.

We buy and sell double date and re-engraved 1962 Canadian Cents and Nickels at the prices and grades listed in this ad. These are the first re-engraved Canadian Coins in quantity enough to be collectable and establish a solid enough market for them since 1859. The double dates are the first ever in Canadian coinage to be struck in enough quantity to make them marketable, yet allow enough mintage to make them a scarce and much sought after collectors piece. At the time of this ad the demand far outweighs the supply. Buy one of each for your collection right now, or a few of each for a really sound looking investment. Limit ½ roll of each denomination and variety per order. Pat Holloway, 226 Avenue Deschamps, Eastview, Ontario. CNA 5344, ONA 387. Member of Gena and Nena. Seven day refund.

1909; the centenary of his birth; the initiative came literally on the heels of a commemorative

(Continued from Page 12) cerned. If your ad has not been successful, the reason for your inability to get response might have been caused by a number of different factors. For example, the ad was too small; the price was high or low in comparison with the market. Buyers are hesitant to buy coins when the price is extremely low. Another factor might be that the ad appeared in a more remote part of the paper, or the ad didn't appear often enough. Prospective buyers and sellers generally will have faith in an individual or business with consistent advertising. Buyers realize the large amount of money spent on weekly advertisements, and to pay for such a large ad, the business must be constantly realizing a profit, and thus pleasing its customers. Also a firm that advertises frequently establishes a reputation that can spell success.

What per cent of the selling price is spent on advertising? Well this varies sharply, but in most cases it is about ten percent of the selling price. If an advertisement cost five hundred dollars, you should do at least five thousand dollars worth of business. This ten percent figure is only a guide. Actual percentage figures can run from one to twenty-five percent. The greater the volumn of business you can do from your advertisement, the lower the advertising percentage. Small investors who run classified ads, may find that the advertisement costs them from five to twenty percent of their selling price.

When figuring the cost of advertising always take into the consideration the time and money spent in packing and getting the shipment ready for mailing.

Make the ad that you submit both a profitable and rewarding experience for you, but also make it a worthy contribution to the entire numismatic spectrum.

signed by Daniel Chester French whose work has served as an inspiration to many private medallists.

Paper Currency

In May 1927, after 18 years of study and investigation, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon approved plans and design for new paper currency. Lincoln's like ness was chosen from the $5 denomination, "because he followed Washington in the rank of American heroes, it seemed logical that (Lincoln's) likeness should appear on the denomination having the second largest circulation."

In an amusing anecdote relating Lincoln's feelings about the motto IN GOD WE TRUST on currency, the late President is quoted as saying: "if you are going to put a motto on the greenbacks, I would suggest that of Peter and John: 'Silver and gold we have not, but what we have we'll give you'." (According to Ward Hill Lamon's "Recollections of Abraham Lincoln," 1847-1865.)

Lincoln Cents for the Collector

The issue has become all but academic whether a beginner collector can expect to complete what was once considered the elementary and basic attribute of a neophyte collector: an album of Lincoln cents.

Rapidly rising prices, coupled with the expectation of considerably higher premiums in the future, make the outlook for the beginner rather bleak; his ability to complete a Lincoln album is no longer based on the arduous task of patient search through thousands of pennies, but rather on his financial power, notably lacking with beginners in general if and only if he wishes unc. coins exclusively, and will not accept a lower grade.

The vertiginous price heights reached by issues such as the 1909-S, V.D.B., 1914-D, 1922-D without D, 1931-S, of more recent vintage the 1955 doubled die obverse, and the final contrivance, 1960 small date, suggest the necessity for a drastic reappraisal of Lincoln cents as a complete

It is likely to see the coin retained in the future as a "type" by beginners. More advanced collectors have already begun to investigate the possibility of completing Lincoln cents in proof condition, for all the years issued - the latter form of collecting is also gaining widespread acceptance for other denominations.

In essence, however, it is only fair to stress that desirable and scarce Lincoln cents in spite of considerable premiums today are likely to witness substantial price increases during the next decade, no matter how distressing this fact may seem to the newcomer.
